History remembers Jacques-Émile Ruhlmann as the true champion of the 1925 International Exhibition of Modern Decorative and Industrial Arts. From March 12 to June 1, 2025, the Musée des Arts Décoratifs will inaugurate its celebration of the centenary of 1925 with a tribute to this exceptional decorator. 26 sketchbooks, 41 wallpapers, textile samples and photographs from the museum's collections bear witness to his immense talent.

While he occasionally participated with his furniture in the decoration of the pavilion of the Société des Artistes Décorateurs, A French Embassy, it was with the Collector's Pavilion that he created an original work. In a building commissioned to his friend, the architect Pierre Patout, quickly nicknamed the Ruhlmann Pavilion, he designed an ideal home, supervising its construction and coordinating nearly fifty artists.

As a furniture and interior designer, Ruhlmann shared his contemporaries' taste for harmonious and coherent interior design. However, as the heir to a flourishing family business in painting, wallpaper, and mirrors, which allowed him to finance his aesthetic dreams, he attached particular importance to the ornamentation of walls and floors. The ensemble presented sheds new light on this personal passion.

Ruhlmann the decorator is revealed through the pages of the twenty-six sketchbooks that his widow bequeathed to the institution in 1959, but also through the wallpapers that have been removed from the walls of the Cité Universitaire and from the collections of two manufacturers, Desfossé & Karth and the Société Française des Papiers Peints (ESSEF), whose productions are preserved by the museum. Ruhlmann designed models for both companies, some of which are presented here for the first time.

From March 12 to May 18, 2025, the Musée des Arts Décoratifs presents a unique exhibition dedicated to the Rococo style. Rococo & co. From Nicolas Pineau to Cindy Sherman explores the evolution of this style, from its emergence in the early 18th century to its resurgence in contemporary design and fashion, including Art Nouveau and psychedelic art. Nearly 200 drawings, furniture, woodwork, objets d'art, lighting, ceramics, and fashion pieces engage in a playful dialogue of curves and counter-curves. Nicolas Pineau and Juste Aurèle Meissonnier join Louis Majorelle, Jean Royère, Alessandro Mendini, as well as fashion designers Tan Giudicelli and Vivienne Westwood, and artists Cindy Sherman and Mathieu Lehanneur. The exhibition is curated by Bénédicte Gady, acting museum director, Turner Edwards, doctoral candidate, and François Gilles, doctoral candidate and sculptor.

This exhibition celebrates the restoration of a unique collection of nearly 500 drawings from the workshop of the sculptor Nicolas Pineau (1684-1754), one of the main proponents of the Rocaille style that Europe adopted as the Rococo. A practitioner of measured asymmetry and a subtle interplay of solids and voids, Nicolas Pineau excelled in many fields: woodwork, sculptural facades, architecture, prints, furniture, and silverware. The presentation of this great Rococo figure is extended to a workshop that plunges the visitor into the heart of the creation of Rococo panelling. Asymmetries, sinuous lines, chinoiserie dreams and animal imagery illustrate the infinite variations of the Rococo style. Finally, from the 19th to the 21st century, this aesthetic has found numerous echoes, from neo-styles to the most unexpected and playful reinterpretations.

From June 4 to September 14, 2025, the Musée des Arts Décoratifs will present the exhibition Bamboo: From Pattern to Work, through its Japanese and Chinese collections for the 8th edition of Asia Week. After focusing on a form in the exhibition Du Bol (About the Bowl) and on materials and know-how in Luxury Objects in China, the museum invites you to discover a recurring motif in Asian art: bamboo.

The theme is divided into four parts: the variation of the motif in a multitude of possibilities, from the forest to a focus on the leaves, the knots of its branches, and the harvesting of the shoots. Bamboo was also used to make fishing traps, which influenced the creation of basketry related to floral art and tea ceremonies.

An inexpensive, strong, and flexible material, bamboo is widely used in architecture and gardens. Prints, paintings, and objects illustrate the ubiquity of bamboo as a plant or used to make windows, blinds, fences, and barriers. With its structure built around emptiness, bamboo is associated with Zen Buddhism and tea practices.

Associated with pine and plum blossoms, bamboo in both China and Japan represents certain qualities of the educated and literate man. Associated with snow or wisteria and birds, it symbolizes the seasons of winter and spring. All its qualities and symbolism also make this grass a favorite form transposed into porcelain, metal, ivory and cloisonné enamel.

The richness of the Japanese and Chinese collections at the Musée des Arts Décoratifs allows the public to discover the great variety of objects on display, most of them for the first time: stencils (katagami), basketry, prints, paintings, original drawings, wallpapers, ceramics, lacquers, bronzes, ivories and textiles.

The Musée des Arts Décoratifs presents the first monograph dedicated to Paul Poiret (1879-1944), an emblematic figure of Parisian haute couture at the beginning of the 20th century. Famous for freeing women from corsets by introducing flowing silhouettes and vibrant colors into his creations, Poiret revolutionized the history of fashion. The exhibition Paul Poiret, la mode est une fête offers an immersion into his creative world, exploring his audacity and artistic power through fashion, decorative arts, perfumery, parties and even gastronomy, in the vibrant cultural context of the first decades of the 20th century. Highlighting the enduring influence of his work on contemporary designers, the exhibition offers visitors a compelling experience through a selection of artworks, documents, and testimonials. After becoming a couturier in 1903, Paul Poiret formulated a bespoke lifestyle for a wealthy and sophisticated clientele with a thirst for novelty. Following the example of his mentor, the couturier Jacques Doucet, he amassed a personal collection of works by artists of his time, some of whom were his friends: from Matisse to Picasso, including Brancusi, not to mention Van Dongen or Dunoyer de Segonzac. Paul Poiret revolutionized fashion by simplifying silhouettes and introducing structural changes such as low waists under the bust, adorned with grosgrain ribbons. His bright and bold color palette, inspired by Fauvism and Orientalism, reflected his innovative spirit.

Drawing on the vast collections of the Musée des Arts Décoratifs (fashion, textiles, furniture, drawings, photographs, illustrations and posters), as well as on prestigious loans, the exhibition explores the various themes that marked the life and work of Paul Poiret, from his fascination with the Ballets Russes to his artistic collaboration with Raoul Dufy, including the 1925 International Exhibition of Modern Decorative and Industrial Arts and its stylistic influence.

In 1925, the International Exhibition of Modern Decorative and Industrial Arts in Paris marked the peak of Art Deco. Decorators, manufacturers, magazines, department stores, artists, and even foreign nations competed fiercely to occupy Parisian buildings or erect temporary structures to display their latest creations. From October 21, 2025, to February 22, 2026, the Musée des Arts Décoratifs will celebrate the centenary of this great style and its success with an exhibition of contemporary scenography.

An aesthetic and artistic trend born before the First World War, Art Deco flourished in the 1920s, coinciding with the emergence of a new way of life. Speed, movement and freedom were now the watchwords of society, breaking with the previous decades. At its height, Art Deco was neither theorized nor formalized. The name itself did not appear until the 1960s and 1970s, when it was applied to a wide variety of creations. Protean and elusive, Art Deco is ultimately a set of forms, motifs, materials, and techniques used by designers in the 1920s and 1930s, a movement capable of embodying the Roaring Twenties.

Modern in their forms, the furniture and objects used the most precious techniques of craftsmanship and were reserved for the wealthiest, without concern for their application to the greater number. The exhibition aims to celebrate this movement in all its facets and contradictions.

In a succession of viewpoints, it will cover the multiple incarnations of Art Deco, from its beginnings in the 1910s to its contemporary reinterpretations, including its rediscovery in 1971. The many masterpieces of the museum's Art Deco collection, the largest in the world, will be on display, such as Groult's shagreen chiffonnier, the elegant pieces by Jacques-Émile Ruhlmann and the library desk from the French Embassy by Pierre Chareau, reinstalled for this anniversary. The frenetic pace and thirst for freedom of the Roaring Twenties will be the leitmotif of this exhibition, where contemporary creation inspired by this movement will find its rightful place.

In the second half of 2026, the Musée des Arts Décoratifs will unveil its new rooms dedicated to Art Deco within the permanent collections.

Curator: Sébastien Quéquet, curator in charge of the Photography collections

From October 29, 2025, to February 1, 2026, the Musée des Arts Décoratifs will present the photographic work of the artist Guénaëlle de Carbonnières in the cabinet des Dessins, Papiers peints et Photographies. Her work revolves around collective memory, particularly using archaeological and architectural images. For the first time, she immersed herself in the photographic collections of the Musée des Arts Décoratifs to collect and reveal their secrets, like an archaeological dig. Fascinated by the book-object of the photographer Franck de Villecholle (1816-1906), who pasted his prints documenting the destruction of the Commune into an old album entitled "Conte de fées" (Fairy Tale), she explored its multiple graphic expressions: collages, tears, glue effects, traces of use, superimpositions and accidents. Her new work echoes these images, between archives and aesthetic images, between historical documents and picture books. Guénaëlle de Carbonnières (born 1986, Paris) was initially trained in philosophy and has an agrégation in fine arts. Her work has been presented at Unseen (Amsterdam), Paris Photo, and Art Paris, as well as at MAPRAA, L'Attrape-Couleurs, and the Fondation Renaud (Lyon), La Résidence (Dompierre-sur-Besbre), and CAP – Centre d'art (Saint-Fons), in resonance with the Lyon Biennale. She is represented by the Françoise Besson Gallery in Lyon and the Binome Gallery in Paris.
